The new issuance schedule is effective in April for:

- New Food Assistance groups
- Food Assistance groups that have a one day break in eligibility
- Food Assistance groups that move from one project area (usually a county) to another

What is considered a new assistance group?

A "new assistance group" is created when: (a) an individual that is not known to CRIS-E applies for food assistance benefits; (b) an individual seeks to be included in his or her own food assistance group in the same case; (c) an individual moves out of a case and applies for food assistance with another case as an independent assistance group; or (d) an individual moves out of a case and applies for food assistance in his or her own case. Cases may contain assistance groups with different issuance schedules.

What is considered a one-day break in eligibility?

A one-day break in eligibility is considered to occur when an assistance group has failed to take a required action. For example, when an assistance group does not complete a recertification timely and there is a one-day break in food assistance eligibility; or when the assistance group does not return verifications, an interim report, etc. during the certification as required and, during reinstatement, the assistance group experiences a one-day break in eligibility.

What is considered an assistance group that has moved from one project area to another?

Any assistance group that moves from one project area (usually a county) to another that is required to file a new application will follow the new issuance schedule.
